

Being a Good Steward

God's Word teaches us that we are to be good stewards with the money He give us.

One of the easiest ways to not spend money or to not over spend money is to just stay home.

If you are at home you are less likely to spend money. Staying home is also being a good steward with your spirit. When you are at home you are less likely to see the evils of this world.

But you may ask what can I do at home?

Have a treasure hunt, it doesn't have to be elaborate pick colors and see what you can find. Or get creative and make a list of specific things.

Go for a walk in your neighborhood and take the treasure hunt with you. Find something that moves without wheels, or something that shines but isn't sun, and so on.

Mom's put on that sports bra and play running red light / green light. Run forward, backward, sideways, hop on one foot, hop backwards and so on.

Part of our problem as adults is that we have become adults, just like those we used to look at when we were still kids and think "I don't ever want to be like that" - Well Don't! After all God's word tells us we must become like a child. Just think how healthy your body would be to act like a child. I'll race you to the mailbox.
